The PDI-03 is the legendary predecessor to the PGA-04 Speaker Simulator. It is a re-issue of the early 90's model with the "battleship gray" housing and metal knobs. The Palmer Speaker Simulator PDI-03 is a combined signal splitter, DI-box, and (when used as a load box) power soak. It comes in a single space rackmount unit. Especially designed for electric guitars and basses, all functions have been optimized for live and studio use.

SPL TransducerAnalog guitar amp simSound on Sound articleSwart Night Light

It's the size of a small effects pedal: 4.67" L x 3.68" W x 1.18" H.

Will work with ANY amplifier 22w or less with the light compression, 30w with it off.

Attenuation settingsFilament BULB Compression ModeThis mode runs the attenuated signal through a Swart level lamp filament, bringing a subtle tube compression/brown sound goodness. NOTE: This switch ONLY works with LEVEL chickenhead at 12oclockBypass compression modeRemoves the light compressor out of the circuit for more natural dynamics. With level at 12oclock, this is least attenuation/highest volume setting.Heavy duty 3 position SwitchThis main chicken head switch allows you to switch between FOUR different attenuation settings. At first setting, or 12oclock, the NL can cycle between the COMP and DECOMP switch which brings two levels. DECOMP is least attenuated or loudest setting with COMP position bringing more attenuation via the bulb filament. Turn the switch to 2oclock will bring more attenuation, bypassing the DECOMP/COMP switch. The lowest setting is about the same loudness as your guitar strings.Switch Doctor

THD HotplateReviews

Review I owned one of these for a while to try and tame my VHT Pittbull 45 watt EL84 combo. It certainly does reduce volume, but I felt that at high attenuation levels it removed all of the dynamics and harmonics. I did not keep it long. I now have a THD Hotplate built into my THD Univalve - I don't need to apply as much attenuation to get the volume I want with the smaller amp - I think they are mated quite well.
